

Michael Mofidian

Bass-Baritone

BACH St John Passion, Jesus College, Cambridge choir

Bass-baritone Michael Mofidian's Jesus had thunderous clarity

MOZART Don Giovanni (Leporello), Royal Academy Opera

Michael Mofidian's Leporello was the best thing about British Youth Opera's Don Giovanni last September and once again he impressed as the put-upon manservant. Mofidian's baritone effortlessly oozes character and his comic nous was welcome as he baited Elvira with Giovanni's labelled conquest-memorabilia, or mimicked his master's magnetism in the Act 2 trio.

Oxford Lieder Festival recital

Choosing a wide-ranging programme of Brahms, Rachmaninov, Wolf and Sibelius, they proved exceptional... Mofidian, from the first, still note of the Brahms (Unbewegte laue Luft, which opens on the word "motionless"), showed himself a singer of immense talent, capable of linguistic and musical dexterity and, in a couple of the songs, a good comic actor too. That he looks a bit like a young Jonas Kaufmann has nothing to do with anything but I just thought I'd mention it.

MOZART Don Giovanni (Leporello), British Youth Opera

The action is smartly and coherently organised and the requisite laughs are generated by the charcoal-toned Leporello of Michael Mofidian, stealing scenes with his edgy comedy. He, like the entire cast, delivers the partially updated rhyming translation with crisp clarity (there are no surtitles).
Yehuda Shapiro, The Stage, Sept 2017

The irresistible energy and wit came from Leporello, Glaswegian Michael Mofidian, also an imaginative singer.

Fiona Maddocks, Observer

Michael Mofidian's Leporello was a very clever assumption – balancing the buffo elements with a rather nastier side – and he sang with suavity.

Russian song recital at Kings Place (with Sholto Kynoch (piano) and Guy Johnston (cello))

Mofidian sang with a lovely focused and vibrant tone, finding something expressively sexy in the songs... Rather impressively Mofidian managed to make the philosophication rather engaging, and the later songs moved from dark intensity to rapture, reaching great lyric beauty at the end.

NICHOLAS JACKSON The Rose and the Ring, King Valoroso) Drapers' Hall

In Scenes 1 and 2, the steady decorated triplets... said much about the sluggish pomposity of King Valoroso XXIV, a role sung impressively by Michael Mofidian who used his stentorian but warm bass to convey the King's self-absorbed inanity. Mofidian, whose diction was superlative, threw himself enthusiastically into a range of minor parts — coachman, gaoler, officer and porter; and in the latter role demonstrated a tangy cockney accent.
