

Rinat Shaham

Mezzo-Soprano

BIZET Carmen, Opera Australia

Israeli-born mezzo-soprano Rinat Shaham once again made an outstanding Carmen, a role she has made her own since Glyndebourne in 2004. Her highly expressive voice and subtlety of tone proved an impressive match for the strutting and mercurial Carmen. She dominated the stage from her first scene in Act I.

Tom Pillans, The Daily Telegraph (Australia), February 2018

Rinat Shaham sings Carmen with a full-bodied voice, defiant power in the low notes and a capacity to create fuming inner intensity as though perceiving a fateful insight at crucial dramatic moments – when smitten in Act 1, her interrupted seduction of Act 2, the reading of the cards in Act 3, and the final scene.

Peter McCallum, The Sydney Morning Herald, February 2018

... the real beauty and emotional depth lies in Shaham's vocal interpretation. Her tone is voluptuously rounded and full of colour and shading. Her lower register is deep and velvety, like rich dark chocolate, whereas there is a golden glow to her higher notes. Most impressive is the extreme dynamic contrast she achieves. In the famous Habanera she starts at such a low, controlled pianissimo that one would think the orchestra would drown her out, and yet that never happens. The balance is always just right. Girlish sex kitten or not, Shaham is clearly in her vocal prime

Alicia Tripp, Sydney Arts Guide, February 2018

Carmen is woman who loves deeply if she loves at all. She is strong and bold and Rinat Shaham encompasses her determined and passionate nature. Her delicious voice allows the audience to dive into her voluptuous and volatile world without question.

Emily Shaddick, Australian Stage, February 2018

Fiery performance from Israeli mezzo-soprano Rinat Shaham, as Carmen ...

MONTEVERDI l'Incoronazione di Poppea, Opera de Nantes

Rinat Shaham est elle aussi sidérante de justesse et de style, affirmant pour les 3 grandes scènes d'Ottavia, ce sens magistral de l'intensité tragique. Son dernier air qui est l'adieu à Rome de l'impératrice répudiée, frappe l'auditeur par sa violence désespérée, la vérité digne d'une victime de la terreur impériale, c'est la femme détruite qui dans l'imaginaire des metteurs en scène devient figure emblématique de toutes les femmes torturées de l'histoire.

Rinat Shaham is just as stunning in narrative and style, affirming for the three great scenes of Ottavia, this masterful sense of tragic intensity. Her last aria, which is the farewell of the repudiated Empress to Rome, strikes the listener with her desperate violence, the truth worthy of a victim of imperial terror, it is the destroyed woman who, in the imagination of the emitters on stage becomes an emblematic figure of all the tortured women of history.

BIZET Carmen, Opera Australia

Rinat Shaham's vocally and dramatically compelling performance ... Such is the beauty and emotional depth of Shaham's vocal interpretation that she would impress just by standing on the spot. Her powerful voice is rich with light and shade, from golden notes of love to the velvety darkness of her lower register as Carmen contemplates death. But far from standing on the spot, she embodies her character: flirtatious, seductive, defiant, Shaham dances, caresses, judiciously reveals some flesh and fights like a tigress

MOZART – Elvira Don Giovanni – La Monnaie

Gestohlen wird ihr die Show von Rinat Shaham, die als Donna Elvira alles andere als eine frustrierte Tussi ist; mit ihrer prachtvollen Stimme und ihren funkelnden Augen lässt die israelische Mezzosopranistin dieser heiklen Partie vielmehr Gerechtigkeit widerfahren.

The show is stolen from her by Rinat Shaham who, as Donna Elvira, is anything but a frustrated floozie. With her splendid voice and flashing eyes the Israeli Mezzosoprano endows this delicate role with far more justification than usual.

Peter Hagman, Neue Zürcher Zeitung, December 2014

BIZET – Title role Carmen – Palm Beach Opera

Israeli mezzo-soprano Rinat Shaham has performed Carmen more than 40 times, all over the world, in both versions. She has an ideal voice for the role: an even, flexible sound that can carry in the low register and rocket to the top. She is also an agile and attractive figure on stage.

Robert Croan, Palm Beach Daily News, January 2016

BIZET – Title role Carmen – Pittsburgh Opera

Mezzo-soprano Rinat Shaham was a riveting presence. Her voice has brightness, depth and allure. And the way she opened up her lower register in the last act was stunning.

Mark Kanny, Pittsburgh Tribune, March 2015

VERDI – Preziosilla The Force of Destiny – English National Opera

Preziosilla ... sung with just the right kind of brittle brilliance by Rinat Shaham ...
